Emergency Preparedness

Do you have an established emergency preparedness plan in place should a crisis develop in your building? What would you do if an active shooter entered your building: lock it down or send everyone home? How would you handle a domestic violence incident? A disgruntled employee has returned to your property?

Join your colleagues on March 18th to hear Joe Donovan of Beacon Capital Partners. Mr. Donovan has assumed responsibility for BOMA International's preparedness committee and has worked with the Department of Homeland Security to study and create programs for the commercial facilities sector.

Joseph Donovan

Mr. Donovan is Senior Vice President at Beacon Capital Partners and oversees and directs the emergency response for Beacon Capital Partner's 30 million square foot portfolio within the U.S., London, and Paris. He works with 17 real estate management companies to develop and execute emergency and crisis management programs with the goals of minimizing the impact of events and supporting the local, regional, and national public service groups' needs to respond to events.
